On August 2025, AlHuda Centre of Islamic Banking and Economics (CIBE) is expected to host a Forum on Islamic Banking and Finance at the Islamic Cultural Centre in London. The event aims to convene industry leaders, policymakers, Shariah scholars, and financial experts to examine the evolving landscape of Islamic finance. The forum seeks to foster robust dialogue, share international best practices, and support the UK's position as a hub for Islamic finance in Europe.

The event will focus on key areas such as Islamic banking, Sukuk, Takaful, and Shariah-compliant investments. Attendees will gain insights into regulatory frameworks, fintech advancements, and the alignment of Islamic finance with Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) principles. These discussions come at a time when the UK is working to maintain its competitive edge in global finance amid shifting economic priorities.

The forum typically includes keynote speeches, panel discussions, and networking sessions, providing opportunities for banking professionals, regulators, asset managers, Shariah advisors, academics, and fintech innovators to deepen expertise and forge partnerships.

AlHuda Centre of Islamic Banking and Economics (CIBE) is a globally recognised authority in Islamic finance, offering research, advisory, and educational services. Its portfolio includes Islamic financial product development, Shariah advisory, training workshops, and consultancies in Islamic microfinance and Takaful.

With operations spanning multiple countries, AlHuda CIBE has been an active contributor to advancing Islamic banking and finance worldwide.
