Retired heavyweight boxing champion Tyson Fury has placed his seaside mansion in Lancaster on the market, marking another chapter in his post-boxing life.

Fury, nicknamed “The Gypsy King,” confirmed his retirement from the sport in early 2025 after a decorated career that saw him dominate the heavyweight division for years. Over the course of his career, Fury built an impressive professional record of 34 wins, 2 losses, and 1 draw, with 24 of those victories coming by way of knockout.

The Lancaster property, now listed on the real estate platform Rightmove, carries an asking price of around £ 800,000. The home boasts panoramic views across Morecambe Bay, stretching to the Lakeland Fells on the horizon. Occupying a prominent position at the junction of Marine Drive and Rushley Drive, the house benefits from its elevated vantage point, offering a scenic and tranquil setting.

The residence features six bedrooms and three bathrooms, with a total floor area of roughly 2,758 square feet. It is located in one of Lancaster's more desirable neighbourhoods, making it a premium listing for buyers seeking both comfort and a coastal lifestyle.

Fury purchased the home in 2015 for an estimated £ 480,000. While he and his family later moved to a larger property in Morecambe, the Lancaster home remained in their property portfolio. It is now being offered for sale after nearly a decade of ownership.

According to the property listing, the home has been designed to maximise its location and views, with large windows and an elevated layout providing an abundance of natural light. The spacious design caters to family living while also offering ample room for guests. Its six bedrooms make it suitable for a larger household or for those seeking additional home office space, while the three bathrooms add to its practicality.

The surrounding area is known for its picturesque scenery, offering easy access to the coast and outdoor leisure activities. For those attracted to peaceful yet well-connected living, the property's location in Lancaster provides a balance between seaside charm and urban accessibility.

Since stepping away from the ring, Fury has been focusing on family life and media ventures. His Netflix reality series, At Home With The Furys, which first aired in 2023, is set to return for a second season later this year.
