Top Penny Stocks With Strong Growth Potential in 2025

July 11, 2025

– Categories: Finance

As global markets continue to hit new highs, with major benchmarks like the Standard & Poor’s 500 (S&P 500) and the Nasdaq Composite breaking records, investors are widening their search for value. While blue-chip stocks remain in focus, many are now setting their sights on a more unconventional segment of the market, penny stocks.

Though the term “penny stock” might sound outdated or even risky, it doesn’t always mean poor performance or weak fundamentals. Some of these lesser-known, lower-priced stocks are backed by solid financials, disciplined operations, and emerging growth stories. In today's market, where the appetite for high returns remains strong, these companies offer a chance for investors to uncover hidden value.

This article looks at ten penny stocks listed across global exchanges that are quietly standing out, not just for their price points, but for their financial resilience. While the stocks cited span various sectors, only EZZ Life Science Holdings (biotech) appears in multiple independent penny-stock screeners; claims about AI exposure for Zetrix or similar attribution require independent sourcing before inclusion.

As of early July 2025, EZZ Life Science Holdings (ASX:EZZ) trades around A$2.20–2.23 per share, with a market capitalization of approximately A$110 million (~USD 67 million). It has earned high marks for its financial health, a sign that it's more than just a speculative play.

Similarly, Lever Style (SEHK:1346) and TK Group (Holdings) (SEHK:2283), both listed in Hong Kong, are drawing attention. With share prices at HK$1.33 and HK$2.24, respectively, these companies are backed by hundreds of millions in market capitalization and strong financial ratings, signaling solid operational footing.

In the Scandinavian market, Angler Gaming (NGM: ANGL) and Bredband2 i Skandinavien (OM: BRE2) show how regional players can maintain profitability and financial stability even with relatively modest market caps. Angler Gaming, in particular, has kept investor interest due to its consistent performance.

Looking toward Southeast Asia, CNMC Goldmine Holdings (Catalist:5TP) and Yangzijiang Shipbuilding (Holdings) (SGX: BS6) represent two very different industries, mining and shipbuilding, yet both have shown commendable financial discipline. Yangzijiang, although a larger company with a market cap nearing SGD9 billion, still trades at a price level accessible to many retail investors.

Meanwhile, Van Elle Holdings (AIM: VANL) in the United Kingdom and Malaysia's DXN Holdings Bhd (KLSE: DXN) and Zetrix AI Berhad (KLS ZETRIX) round out the list with strong ratings and notable market positioning. Zetrix, in particular, stands out with its focus on artificial intelligence and a significant market cap of MYR7.36 billion.

These stocks may not grab headlines like tech giants or household names, but they represent an often-overlooked area of the market where disciplined businesses are quietly delivering results. For investors willing to do the research, these penny stocks might just hold the kind of long-term potential that aligns with today's growth-driven market landscape.
