

Mike Huckabee Criticises UK PM Starmer Over Israel Comments

August 9, 2025

— Categories: Breaking News

Download IPFS

Former Arkansas Governor and US Ambassador Mike Huckabee has delivered a sharp rebuke of British Prime Minister Keir Starmer following his public denunciation of Israel amid ongoing conflict in the Middle East.

In a pointed statement, Huckabee asked if the UK had “surrendered to the Nazis and dropped food to them,” referencing Starmer’s recent harsh criticism of Israel’s military actions. The former US official's remarks underscore growing concern among some international figures about the UK government's stance under Starmer's leadership.

Huckabee's comments come amid an intensifying debate over the UK's foreign policy toward Israel. In a recent interview with Fox News, Huckabee accused Starmer of adopting an overly critical posture toward Israel, contrasting this with the historically strong British support for Israel's right to defend itself. He argued that Starmer's rhetoric risks damaging the UK's reputation as a dependable ally in a volatile region.

The Labour leader has publicly condemned Israel's military operations, drawing criticism from Conservative figures and others who believe that such statements undermine the country's diplomatic influence. Critics suggest Starmer's approach is out of step with both the UK's national interests and its long-standing foreign policy traditions.

Political commentators have observed that Starmer's stance may alienate moderate voters and members within his party who favour a balanced approach to Middle East diplomacy. The relationship between the UK and Israel has historically required careful navigation, especially given the complex geopolitical tensions in the region.

Opponents argue that Starmer's emphasis on human rights concerns often overlooks the legitimate security challenges Israel faces from hostile groups. This imbalance, they warn, could further strain bilateral relations and weaken the UK's ability to play a constructive role in peace efforts.

The Labour Party's position on Israel has become a divisive issue ahead of forthcoming elections, with voters paying close attention to how the UK will manage its foreign affairs. The government's approach under Starmer contrasts sharply with the previous Conservative administrations, which tended to offer more unequivocal support for Israel.

Internationally, Huckabee's rebuke highlights the wider ramifications of the UK's political discourse on foreign policy. His remarks have resonated among conservative circles in the United States and beyond, where many view Starmer's criticism as indicative of a shift in the UK's traditional alliances.

As the conflict in the Middle East persists, calls for a pragmatic and measured response from the UK grow louder. Both sides of the political spectrum are increasingly aware of the delicate balance required to maintain peace and security in the region.

Huckabee's blunt criticism of Starmer serves as a reminder that foreign policy statements carry significant weight and consequences. It also underlines the importance of careful diplomacy, particularly in areas as sensitive as the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

The ongoing debate will likely remain a focal point in UK politics as the nation prepares for future elections and continues to define its global role post-Brexit.