Prime Minister Shehbaz Sharif has commended the creativity and talent of Talha Ahmad, a young digital content creator making waves in the online space.

In a meeting held on Saturday, the prime minister personally congratulated Talha on his successful work across digital platforms. The interaction, highlighted in a statement by the PM Office Media Wing, emphasized the government’s recognition of emerging talent among the country’s youth.

As a token of appreciation, Prime Minister Sharif presented Talha with an honorary shield and an electronic tablet, symbolizing encouragement for his achievements and future endeavors.

“Young people like Talha Ahmad are proving their potential on global platforms,” the prime minister said. “Their talent and innovation reflect the bright future of Pakistan’s youth.”

The recognition is part of a broader push by the government to support digital innovation and empower young creators in Pakistan’s growing online economy. Officials say this initiative underscores the administration’s commitment to uplifting young voices in the rapidly evolving digital landscape.

Talha Ahmad joins a growing list of young Pakistanis gaining national and international attention for their work in content creation, technology, and entrepreneurship.
