A frantic search is underway for a 22-year-old woman from Swansea who has been reported missing, with police urging members of the public to contact emergency services immediately if they spot her.

South Wales Police have issued an urgent appeal to locate Sherine Dunn, who was last seen in the city centre area. Officers have expressed concern for her welfare and are calling on anyone with information to come forward. According to the police, Sherine has connections to the Townhill, St Thomas, and Bonymaen areas of Swansea.

A spokesperson for the force released the following statement: “Sherine Dunn, 22, from Swansea, is missing and there is concern for her welfare. Sherine is from the city centre but has links to Townhill, St Thomas, and Bonymaen. She is described as 5ft 2in tall, slim build, with long hair, and has tattoos on her neck.”

Authorities are encouraging anyone who may have seen her or who might hold information relevant to her whereabouts to get in touch immediately by calling 999, the United Kingdom’s emergency telephone number.

The public is urged to act swiftly, as time is often critical in cases involving vulnerable or at-risk individuals. As of this writing, there have been no confirmed sightings, and her current location remains unknown. Police continue to carry out inquiries and are working closely with those close to Sherine in hopes of tracing her safe and well.

Anyone who believes they may have seen Sherine or has information that could assist the investigation is asked to contact South Wales Police without delay.
